

As a fellow student navigating the highs and lows of campus life, I want to build something real with you—not just another bureaucratic flowchart.

My mission is simple: to listen fiercely and translate your stories into action. As a Communication student, I know words matter—but what matters more is how we honor them.

I shall translate our experiences on campus into a candid conversation perhaps an anonymous vent in an online forum or a cozy in-person conversation over a cup of tea.

When advocating for change, I'll share raw, unfiltered, up-to-date information equally and fairly rather than polished reports. Set video diaries, articles, and live Q&As to the agenda.

I'm not here to "fix" things alone. But bringing all of you together. This isn't about grand theories—it's about creating a culture where we all feel heard, even when we disagree. Let's swap apathy for action, one honest conversation at a time. I'm just a student like you—but I'll show up, listen hard, and fight smarter to make our voices impossible to ignore.
